

Program Revision Proposal: Changes to an Existing Program

Form 3A

Version 2016-10-13

SUNY approval and SED registration are required for many changes to registered programs. To request a change to a registered program leading to an undergraduate degree, a graduate degree, or a certificate that does not involve the creation of a new program,¹ a Chief Executive or Chief Academic Officer must submit a signed cover letter and this completed form to the SUNY Provost at program.review@suny.edu.

Section 1. General Information
a) Institutional Information	Institution's 6-digit SED Code : 236000
	Institution's Name: SUNY Potsdam
	Address: State University of New York at Potsdam 44 Pierrepont Ave Potsdam, NY 13676
b) Program Locations	List each campus where the entire program will be offered (with each institutional or branch campus 6-digit SED Code): 236000
	List the name and address of off-campus locations (i.e., extension sites or extension centers) where courses will offered, or check here [X] if not applicable :
c) Registered Program to be Changed	Program Title: International Studies
	SED Program Code : 37169
	Award(s) (e.g., A.A., B.S.): BA
	Number of Required Credits: Minimum [31] If tracks or options, largest minimum [31]
	HEGIS Code :
	CIP 2010 Code :
	Effective Date of Change:
	Effective Date of Completion ² :
d) Campus Contact	Name and title: Jill Pearson, Associate Provost Telephone and email: pearonjr@potsdam.edu ; (315)267 - 2079
e) Chief Executive or Chief Academic Officer Approval	Signature affirms that the proposal has met all applicable campus administrative and shared governance procedures for consultation, and the institution's commitment to support the proposed program. E-signatures are acceptable. Name and title: Signature and date:
	If the program will be registered jointly³ with one or more other institutions, provide the following information for each institution:
	Partner institution's name and 6-digit SED Code : Name, title, and signature of partner institution's CEO (or append a signed letter indicating approval of this proposal):

¹ To propose changes that would create a new program, Form 3B, Creating a New Program from Existing Program\(s\), is required.

² If the current program(s) must remain registered until enrolled students have graduated, the anticipated effective date by which continuing students will have completed the current version of the program(s).

³ If the partner institution is non-degree-granting, see SED's CEO Memo 94-04.

Changes in a program's focus or design

Adding or eliminating one or more options, concentrations or tracks

When the International Studies major was formed in Fall of 2015, it was formed around a Political Economy core with a History foundation, which reflected the participating programs and institutional needs at that time. The program has been very successful and distinctly interdisciplinary with well-cooperating departments and double- and triple-majoring students, some of whom have been accepted to top-ranking graduate programs. While the program has produced highly-successful and well-rounded graduates and a solid number of majors (usually ~ 30), the International Studies Advisory Committee believes the program can become even better and bigger. The revision presented here improves the program in five important ways:

- 1) addition of the Anthropology Department to the major,
- 2) addition of a mandatory methods and research writing course,
- 3) revision of a core requirement,
- 4) elimination of one elective (reduction from 6 to 5),
- 5) addition of concentrations in a) Political Economy and b) History and Culture.

1) Addition of Anthropology to the International Studies major

Traditionally, International Studies majors are multi- and interdisciplinary in their approach and can include a variety of disciplines, programs, and departments, which often include Anthropology, Economics, Geography, History, Political Science, and Sociology. With only a Political Economy focus and a History foundation, the International Studies major at Potsdam was comparatively narrow in its focus but keeping with institutional capacities and strategies at the time. Since the program consolidated very quickly and consistently reaches around 30 majors, the International Studies Advisory Board decided it was timely to expand the major and create a more traditional International Studies major here at Potsdam with the inclusion of Anthropology as a third department in the program. Anthropology will provide methods and research writing courses and a variety of electives for the major. The newly included courses are listed in Appendix A. Even without the explicit inclusion of Anthropology in the program, multiple students have graduated with a double-major in Anthropology and International Studies, which already indicates student demand and the broadened program should attract additional students.

2) Revision of a Core Required Course

Thus far, the Economics core required course has been ECON 302 Global Economy. This course was chosen because it already existed, and we were trying to create a cost neutral new major. While the course has worked reasonably well for the major so far, it was often awkward for students to fit the course into their studies. Since it was a 300-level course, they could not take this course as early as the other core requirements, which then left the students less time to develop a focus on Economics courses as they were often in their junior year by the time they took Global Economy. Due to the changes in the Economics program, we are now able to offer a more introductory course specifically targeting the Economics needs of IS students as well. This will put Economics more on equal footing with the other participating programs and expose students much earlier to the Economics approach. This course can now also serve as the pre-requisite for upper-division Economics courses (if one is necessary). To date, these pre-requisites were mainly Intro to Macro or Micro, which are not part of the IS curriculum and made it even harder for IS students to take upper-division Economics courses. This new course should eliminate all these problems.

3) Methods and Research Writing

The vast majority of our majors are double-majors and have received methods and research writing instruction in courses such as POLS 289 Political Puzzles and HIST 302 Fighting Words in their other majors. These students tended to do well in their upper-division courses as they were able to apply what they had learned in the methods and research writing courses. Over the past semesters a few of us started to see a some much less prepared students in our upper-division courses who struggled particularly with the required research and writing in these courses. We realized last semester that the struggling students had in common the lack of a second major and the resulting instruction on how to conduct research and complete a methodologically rigorous project. Such a methods and research writing course is very common in all social sciences curricula. Due to the multitude of possible methodological approaches to the study of International Studies, research writing courses are often not taught as a single course and many programs allow students to choose the methods course that will best prepare them for upper-division courses within their area of interest or concentration. Consequently, the new International Studies major will require one Methods and Research Writing course as a mandatory component for all students. The currently regularly taught courses that fulfill the requirement are ANTH 203 Cultural Anthropology, ECON 201 Disagreements Among Economists, HIST 302 Fighting Words, and POLS 289 Political Puzzles. Other courses may be considered (approval by the Coordinator and Advisory Committee for International Studies required).

4) Elimination of an Upper-Division Elective Course Requirement

Since the International Studies major already requires the completion of 9 courses, an intercultural experience, and a 203-level language course, the International Studies Advisory Committee does not want to expand the total number of major requirements. Consequently, the addition of the new Methods and Research Writing course mandatory requirement necessitates the elimination of one of the upper-division elective course requirements. The number of electives for the International Studies major is reduced from 6 to 5. Of the 5 required electives, still only one course can be a lower-division elective.

5) Additions of Concentrations

One of the reasons why the International Studies Advisory Committee wanted to be mindful when broadening the offerings through adding the Anthropology courses was the maintenance of rigor and focus in the program. The addition of the Methods and Research Writing course is one addition which will help ensure this. The second modification of the major is the creation of concentrations within the major. The addition of Anthropology will increase the student choices and the concentrations will give students guidance in the completion of an academically-focused and rigorous program. This revision introduces two concentrations within the International Studies major: a) Political Economy and b) History and Culture. Each concentration requires students to take 5 courses within their concentration. Details of the structure of the concentrations and a complete list of electives are listed in Appendix A-2 for Political Economy and A-3 for History and Culture.

a) Political Economy

The Political Economy concentration allows students to focus their studies within International Studies on the analysis of markets and states and their interactions. Within this concentration, students can choose from a variety of Politics (POLS) and Economics (ECON) courses with topics ranging from international trade, international money and finance, to development, history and comparisons of economic systems and global inequality.

b) History and Culture

The History and Culture concentration allows students to focus their studies within International Relations on the understanding of historical foundations of the international system and cultures and their interactions outside of the United States and the Western context. Within this concentration student choose from a variety of History (HIST) and Anthropology (ANTH) courses with topics ranging from aspects of African, Caribbean and Asian history to the study of cultural aspects such as food, art, and language among others.

- b) Provide a side-by-side comparison of all the courses in the existing and proposed revised program that clearly indicates all new or significantly revised courses, and other changes.

Please see Appendix A for side-by side comparisons of courses and concentrations.

c) For each new or significantly revised course, provide a syllabus at the end of this form, and, on the SUNY Faculty Please see Appendix B for all new course descriptions and syllabi.

d) What are the additional costs of the change, if any? If there are no anticipated costs, explain why.
There are no anticipated additional costs associated with this revision. While the major could benefit tremendously from a capstone experience, we are proposing these changes here because they can be accomplished without significant impact on our current operations. Our sophomore, junior, and senior classes in the major tend to be around 8-10 students each currently. Through advising we will ensure that the vast majority of students take their Methods and Research Writing course during their sophomore year. Given our number of double-majors, it is reasonable to assume that in any given year no more than 6 additional students would enroll in POLS 289, HIST 302, and ANTH 203. Considering current enrollment numbers in these courses and the frequency with which they are offered (each semester or each year), no change to current course offerings is necessary. This change will make existing classes with open capacities slightly fuller. All departments have agreed to allow International Studies students into the courses. The cooperation with Anthropology should also generate mutually beneficial outcomes at no additional cost. The administrative work of the Coordinator for International Studies will increase.

Side-by-side Comparison of the Existing and Proposed Program for International Studies

Last Registration - 2015	Credits	Proposed Revision – 2019	Credits	Reason for Change
POLS 130 Intro. to Comp. Politics	4	No changes	4
POLS 140 Intro. to Intl Relations	4	No changes	4
POLS 289 Political Puzzles	4	New course – fulfills the Methods and Research Writing requirement for the International Studies major, fulfills the Methods and Research Writing requirement for the Political Economy Concentration	4	This course is one of the choices for students to fulfill the new Methods and Research Writing requirement. It introduces students to the process of writing an original undergraduate research paper in the field of Political Science or International Studies. Part 1 of the course is devoted to reading and understanding professional research reports. The focus of part 2 is writing a literature review in response to a research question. In Part 3, students become familiar with common research designs and methods of analysis.
POLS 334 Democracy Lab	4	Now also counts as an elective in the Political Economy concentration	4	Establishment of concentrations within the major.
POLS 335 International Conflict	4	Now also counts as an elective in the Political Economy concentration	4	Establishment of concentrations within the major.
POLS 337 International Political Economy	4	Now also counts as an elective in the Political Economy concentration	4	Establishment of concentrations within the major.
POLS 349 European Union	4	Now also counts as an elective in the Political Economy concentration	4	Establishment of concentrations within the major.

POLS 432 Politics of Global Inequality	4	Now also counts as an elective in the Political Economy concentration	4	Establishment of concentrations within the major.
-		ECON 102 Economics and Global Capitalism	3	This course replaces the previous Economics core requirement (ECON 302).
ECON 201 Disagreements Among Economists	3	New course – fulfills the Methods and Research Writing requirement for the International Studies major, fulfills the Methods and Research Writing requirement for the Political Economy Concentration		New course – fulfills the Methods and Research Writing requirement for the International Studies major, fulfills the Methods and Research Writing requirement for the Political Economy Concentration. Syllabus attached.
ECON 302 Global Economy	3	This course is no longer a core requirement for the IS major and will now serve as an Economics elective for the IS major.		This now allows all core requirements in the major to be lower division. With this course becoming an elective (after some content revision) we are able to broaden the Economics courses within the major further. This course will now build on ECON 102.

ECON 311 European Econ. History	3	Now also counts as an elective in the Political Economy concentration	3	Establishment of concentrations within the major.

HIST 470 African Environ. History	3	Now also counts as an elective in the History and Culture concentration	3	Establishment of concentrations within the major.
ANTH 107 World Cultures	3	New course in the major – counts also as an elective in the History and Culture concentration	3	To broaden the International Studies major, Anthropology is now included in the major. This course surveys the diverse cultures of the world using case studies in anthropology. We will pay particular attention to cultural relativism, the interconnections between different cultural systems and culture change
ANTH 111 Intro to Anthropology	3	New course in the major – counts also as an elective in the History and Culture concentration	3	To broaden the International Studies major, Anthropology is now included in the major. This course focuses on the discipline of anthropology. We will learn about the different sub-disciplines of anthropology: cultural, biological, linguistics, archaeology and applied anthropology and how each collects and analyzes data. We will learn about the similarities and differences between cultures and why they exist. We will learn how anthropology may be applied to future issues and how it may contribute to your future.
ANTH 140 World Art and Culture	3	New course in the major – counts also as an elective in the History and Culture concentration	3	To broaden the International Studies major, Anthropology is now included in the major. This course is an introduction to the expression of culture through art and visual display. We will explore how cultures throughout the world define identity through body decoration, painting, sculpture, film, museums, pop culture and other activities. The symbolic and visual meanings will be placed in the context of other categories such as religion, gender and ethnic identity.
ANTH 202 Cultural Anthropology	4	Used to be elective, now one of the options for the Research Writing requirement	4	Lecture and Lab. This course is one of the choices for students to fulfill the new Methods and Research Writing requirement. This course is a survey of the sub-discipline of anthropology that uses the concept of culture to interpret human history and behavior in all societies and at all times. This course provides an introduction to the various research methods of cultural anthropology. Emphasis is placed on the application of social and cultural concepts when analyzing behavior. The lab component of the course will give students training in a number of ethnographic data collection and analysis techniques commonly used by cultural anthropologists. Labs will include informal and semi-structured interviews, ethno-semantic domains, genealogy, survey design, archival research, social networks, comparative analysis and fieldwork ethics.
ANTH 203 Language and Culture	4	New course in the major – counts also as an elective in the History and Culture concentration	4	To broaden the International Studies major, Anthropology is now included in the major. This course looks at language as a set of cultural practices. We will discuss the structure of language, language change, regional and social dialects, slang, gender and ethnicity. We will explore the function, nature and role of human language within cultural production, social institutions, and the construction of group and individual identities. The lab component will provide training in the collection and analysis of phonological, morphological, syntactic and semantic data from a variety of languages. Labs will include transcription of natural speech, comparative analysis of data to reconstruct proto forms, the analysis of gender influences on language, the analysis of conversation and the effects of social attitudes on language use. Spring.

ANTH 357 Social Geography	4	New course in the major – counts also as an elective in the History and Culture concentration	4	Cross listed as GEOG 360. To broaden the International Studies major, Anthropology is now included in the major. This course introduces students to the physical environments of the world, human interaction with those environments, the world's political units and the social issues that different countries and peoples of the world must face. We will be looking at several issues that are pertinent to our world today: ethnic struggles, racism, population trends, problems of urbanization, the effects of global market economies, environmental impacts and others. Examples will be drawn from contemporary, recent and past cultures from around the world.
ANTH 358 Cross Cultural Approaches to Art	3	New course in the major – counts also as an elective in the History and Culture concentration	3	To broaden the International Studies major, Anthropology is now included in the major. How can the term "art" be applied in a cross-cultural context? This course approaches the changing definitions of this category from both contemporary and historical perspectives. Our study will include material from four broad cultural areas in detail: Native American, Aboriginal Australian, African and Chinese. We will consider how contemporary artists in all four areas have had to negotiate between the continuity of tradition and social change. The course will address broad topics such as the ritual use of art, authenticity, aesthetics, tradition and modernity, art education, social memory, politics and creativity.
ANTH 360 Cult. of Mexico & Centr America	3	New course in the major – counts also as an elective in the History and Culture concentration	3	To broaden the International Studies major, Anthropology is now included in the major. This course focuses on the culture of Mesoamerican from conquest to present day. Emphasis on effects of conquest and colonial governmental systems on indigenous cultures.
ANTH 368 - Peopling of the World	3	New course in the major – counts also as	3	To broaden the International Studies major, Anthropology is now an elective in the History and Culture concentration		included in the major. This course investigates human origins and the prehistoric dispersal of human populations around the world through time. A series of peopling events, the first settlement of a geographic region by an anatomically modern human population, or other hominin populations, and later prehistoric events in each world region will be studied. In each region, available cultural, linguistic, archaeological and biological anthropological data will be explored in an attempt to discern a cohesive pattern of which regional modern human populations are most closely related to one another, how all modern human groups are related to each other and how all human groups are related to extinct hominin populations.

ANTH 395 – South Asia Uncensored	3	New course in the major – counts also as an elective in the History and Culture concentration	3	To broaden the International Studies major, Anthropology is now included in the major. This course is an anthropological exploration of social and cultural life in South Asia. We will investigate the interrelated themes of religion, caste and class, family and marriage, gender and sexuality, colonialism and nationalism and globalization primarily through ethnographic and historical cases. These primary materials will be supplemented with literary, visual and performative expressions and representations that both reinforce and challenge popular stereotypes of South Asian peoples and cultures. Lectures, readings, discussions, films and experiential exercises will focus mostly on India, Pakistan, Bangladesh, Sri Lanka and Nepal.
